www.orchestra-instruments.com

The santur (also santour, santoor) is a three-octave wooden-hammered dulcimer of Iran, with seventy-two strings which are arranged on adjustable tuning pegs in eighteen quadruple sets.

It is a rectangular, or more often trapezoid-shaped, hollow box the strings of which are either struck with light hammers or plucked.

The Santur can be made from various kinds of wood (walnut, rosewood, betel palm, etc.) depending on the desired sound quality. The front and the back of the instrument are connected by soundposts whose positions play an important role in the sound quality of the instrument.
